

Crazies And Guns

We awaken to the news that a pop singer has been shot to her death in Orlando.

No reason is given, just a crazy person who had access to guns.

If I were a cynical person, I would be happy that he saved the state the expense of a trial by killing himself, but that is the low road.

If we "did unto others" as we should, the young man would have gotten help, and both of the people would still be alive.

At some point we have to realize it's cheaper in the long run to help the troubled, rather than arm them.