

Alligators At Disney

While we try to escape the bone crushing heat, and thanking our lucky stars we're not retired in Phoenix, watching CNN around the clock becomes our number one past time.

The focus in Orlando right now is to see how much signage Disney can throw up to make themselves look like responsible citizens. Responsible but irresponsible, if you know what I mean.

A child waded into a lagoon at a luxury resort and was killed a horrific death in front of his parents, and Disney doesn't want to appear responsible. That's irresponsible, right?
